

My Father Looks Like Me

Kiriti Sengupta

This isn't unfounded.
If you think any other way, you are mistaken.
Hinting at his emission is scientific.
Other reasons will fall short.
I'm the one from the crowd:
the rest were lost.

No one ever keeps an account.
Look at me: I made him a parent.
The world claims Ma and me are identical.
They fail to notice she and Baba look alike.

Father informs the doctor:

Urge is marred for early climax.

How would his young boy retaliate
when he learns the record?

Son may gloat over the remissness,
swanking about his machismo.

The teenager can further probe the issue,
check medications, etc.

But how likely will the chap
consider the Jane?
